Conclude by stating:

1. Positive comments.
2. Point out that
   - science is collaborative.
   - it is important to have good note taking skills.
   - it is important to be able to interpret data.
   - it is important not to remain fixed in one’s interpretation of data; be flexible.
3. Their stories may have had to be totally rewritten in order to include all data and that is actually a part of doing good science-changing theories to include/account for all known information.

Collect and grade the assignment. Have the student leader/directors return all data in their original envelopes, without looking at the remaining bits of data.
